In his presentation, he first explained the institutional philosophy of CMET, then he went on to talk about various areas of research at CMET. He covered many research areas that are being explored at C-MET, Pune. He talked about ceramic materials, semiconductor materials and their importance in the material industry. He highlighted the need of developing skills and said that many new opportunities are emerging for example in Electronic Packaging Industry. Dr. Kale tried to convey the significance of doing startups. To make his point he gave an example of synthesizing small intermediates in an efficient way. To explain the value associated with it he explained the economies of scale to students in simple words. He asked students to develop a good research aptitude. Then he went of to explain research areas such as Internet of Things (IoT), Computer Simulations, 3-D Printing, Renewable Energy, Solar Cells etc. He talked briefly about Energy storage strategies by explaining Li-Ion, Na-Ion Batteries, Supercapacitors, Thermoelectric devices, Piezoelectric devices etc. Dr. Kale showed the battery unit at CMET in his slides to students. His overall message to student was that there are many opportunities for students from chemistry, physics background in material science that they should approach and pursue as a career. Dr. Kale was felicitated by Dr. A. N. Jagdale (HoD, Chemistry Department) after his talk was over.

Dr. B. B. Kale while giving his keynote address

The second speaker of the programme was Dr. Rajendrakumar Sharma from SPEL Technologies. Dr. Bankar introduced him to students. Dr. Sharma is one of the pioneering scientists in India in the area of Supercapacitors. After his introduction, Dr. Sharma was offered the stage for his talk. He briefly talked about his research expertise which is energy storage devices. He explained the principle behind the working of batteries- firstly Lead acid batteries, then Li, Na Ion Batteries. He emphasized why it is of great importance perhaps of national importance, to develop an indigenous battery technology and to be self-sustainable in this field from raw material's perspective. He talked about advantages as well as limitation of the current battery technology. Then he moved on to briefly talk about recent advancements in Supercapacitors. He compared Batteries vs Capacitors. He mentioned limitations of capacitors and presented an overview of Hybrid Battery + Supercapacitors, Quantum Capacitors, etc. Dr. Sharma presented a good snapshot of current scenario in the Battery and Supercapacitor Research. He was felicitated by Dr. Jagdale after his talk was over.

In the third session of the programme, Dr. Sudhir Arbuji was the speaker. Dr. Bankar introduced him, then he was offered the podium for his talk. Dr. Arbuji spoke candidly with students. He talked about career opportunities in research. He presented an overview of career directions that a student may come across in material science. He talked about career-oriented initiatives at CMET, one such initiative was Work-Learn programme where a student would earn a stipend while working in the research lab at CMET. Dr. S. N. Shelke thanked Dr. Arbuji and felicitated him after his talk. In the last session Dr. Hawaldar had a frank interaction with students. He explained what Quantum computers are and why they are needed over conventional computers. He explained the concept of simulation to students.
